Conclusive Hiring

Staffing that goes beyond finding technical skills - Find the best problem solvers.

Every software development department, infrastructure group or IT team has those 2-3 "go-to" people. The ones who identify and solve a problem in one hour that others spent two days on. These are the people who are referenced when a manager says, "That sound like a good idea, but run it by ____."

We believe the common denominator in these "go-to" people are their problem-solving skills. While technical skills are important, we have proven that problem-solving skills are what sets key personnel apart. In fact, we have created an assessment that can measure the problem-solving capabilities of an individual and it's incredibly powerful.

Finding the RIGHT type of person who can help your organization move forward can be challenging.

Decide Consulting uses proprietary tools and techniques to not only find the technical skills that your business needs, but also professionals capable of progressing a project, making software that works and overcoming the obstacles inevitable with projects that go beyond technical know-how. It is a different approach to finding the best candidates and a better one.

Do you want to bring in more people as good as the top 10% or middle-of-the-pack?
